Welcome

Hi, and welcome in 💖 This workbook is your companion through the course. Pick it up after each part, answer honestly, and check things off as you go. It's action, not perfection, that builds a channel.

Five chapters, five weeks

- ☐ ① Mindset: you don't need to show your face or be an expert.
- ☐ ② Niche: find the topic the market already wants.
- ☐ ③ Packaging: a title and thumbnail that get people to click.
- ☐ ④ Production: let AI take eighty percent of the job.
- ☐ ⑤ Scale: turn the numbers into action and income.

My promise to myself

Why do you want to start this channel? Write it down, so you remember it on the day it feels hard.

You don't need to do everything at once. One chapter, one week, one step. That's enough.

Module 1: Mindset

You don't need to show your face or be an expert to start a YouTube channel. A faceless channel uses voice, images and text, and AI means one person can make what used to require a whole team.

Reflection

Which excuse do you recognise most in yourself, "too crowded", "can't edit", "not technical" or "no time"?

What would a YouTube channel do for you and your LME journey, if it worked?

Checklist

- ☐ I have watched the first two lessons of the course.
- ☐ I have answered both reflection questions above honestly.
- ☐ I have decided to take the first step.
- ☐ I have set aside thirty minutes this week for the channel.

This week's step

Write down your excuse, and why it no longer holds up.

Module 2: Find a profitable niche

The most common reason beginners fail is the wrong niche. See YouTube as a marketplace, not a stage. A promising niche usually has a channel under a hundred thousand subscribers with a video over a hundred thousand views, started in the last six months.

Reflection

Write down three topics you could make fifty videos about.

Which of them have you seen the most small channels grow quickly in lately?

Checklist for a good niche

- ☐ I have found a channel under 100,000 subscribers with a video over 100,000 views.
- ☐ The channel was started recently and is growing steadily.
- ☐ The content is easy to recreate without showing your face.
- ☐ Other small channels in the same niche are getting views too.

This week's step

Search your topic on a fresh account, and write down the three channels YouTube recommends you most often.

Module 3: Idea and packaging

Once the niche is in place, almost everything is decided by the title and the thumbnail. Don't reinvent the wheel, model what has already won. Good titles are broad and under sixty characters, and good thumbnails have two to three focal points and clear contrast.

Reflection

Find three thumbnails in your niche. Which would you click on, and why?

Write three titles for your first video. Are they broad enough, and under sixty characters?

Checklist for good packaging

- ☐ The title is broad enough that many will click.
- ☐ The title is under sixty characters so it doesn't get cut off.
- ☐ The thumbnail has two to three focal points and good contrast.
- ☐ The title and image promise one thing, and the video keeps that promise.

This week's step

Use the "Packaging" recipe in the course to get ten titles and a thumbnail idea.

Module 4: AI and production

The script is the backbone of the video. Claude writes a full script in twenty minutes when you give it a winning script as a reference. You make the voice with an AI tool, and source or create images with AI. Eighty percent of the job can now be done with AI.

Reflection

Which production step do you dread the most? What can AI take off your hands?

What are the first fifteen seconds of your video, your hook?

Checklist for production

- ☐ I have used the "Script" recipe and gotten a draft from Claude.
- ☐ I have tested several variations of the hook.
- ☐ I have made a board with the columns idea, script, voice, editing, published.
- ☐ I know which steps I do myself, and which AI can take.

This week's step

Write your very first script with Claude, ready for editing in LME Reel Studio.

Module 5: Scale and earn money

A channel can earn money in several ways at once: ads, sponsorships and your own products from day one. For you at LME, that last one is especially powerful, the channel can send people straight to your courses, books and community. Start with one niche, and scale only once it works.

Reflection

Which of your own products or services could your channel send people on to?

In three months, what's one number you want to see go up?

Checklist to get going

- ☐ I have chosen my niche for this round.
- ☐ I have published, or planned, my first video.
- ☐ I know where the channel should send people on to in LME.
- ☐ I have set a date to check the numbers again.

This week's step

Choose your niche. That's enough to be underway.

You have the system now 🌸

You don't need to see the whole staircase to take the first step. Come back to this workbook whenever you need a little push, and check things off as you go.

Start small

Choose one module, and use it this week. Let it be allowed to be simple.

Keep building in LME

Write scripts in Claude, edit in LME Reel Studio, and share the growth in LME Inner Circle.

I'm cheering you on

Warm wishes, Renate.

My first step

Write down the one thing you want to start with this week.
