A lead magnet is a gift

The best lead magnet solves one concrete problem, fast. Don't think “my whole course for free”, think “the one thing people struggle with most right now”. Here are five formats that work well, whatever you do.

- ☐ ① The checklist: a short, concrete list that solves one problem in under five minutes. Easiest to make, fastest to use.
- ☐ ② The mini-guide: two to four pages that explain “how”, with a few images or examples.
- ☐ ③ The challenge: three to five days with one small email and one small step each day. Builds habit and trust at the same time.
- ☐ ④ The template: a ready-made setup people simply fill in themselves, like a weekly plan or a form.
- ☐ ⑤ The short audio or video session: ten to fifteen minutes that gives one “aha” moment, without requiring much editing.

Choose yours

Which problem do you see most often in the people you talk to, and which of the five formats above fits that problem best?

You don't need the perfect idea, just a good enough one to start with today.

You have the idea, now build the system

A good idea alone doesn't build a list. The next step is finishing the gift, setting up a simple sign-up page, and writing a welcome series that builds trust automatically. That's exactly what you learn, step by step, in “Grow your email list”.

The whole system, ten modules

From idea to lead magnet, sign-up page, welcome series and further growth, all at your own pace.

With workbook and templates

Ready-made text templates, an idea bank and a checklist come with it, so you don't have to start from a blank page.

I'm cheering you on

Warm wishes, Renate.
