WELCOME

How to use this workbook

Hi, and welcome in ❤️ This workbook is meant to be your companion through the course. Pick it up after each part, answer the questions honestly, and check things off as you go. It's action, not perfection, that builds a channel.

You don't need to do everything at once. One chapter, one week, one step. That's enough. Warm wishes, Renate.

Five chapters, five weeks

- ☐ ① Mindset
- ☐ ② Niche
- ☐ ③ Packaging
- ☐ ④ Production
- ☐ ⑤ Scale and earn

MODULE 1

Mindset

You don't need to show your face or be an expert to start a YouTube channel. A faceless channel uses voice, images and text, and AI means one person can make what used to require a whole team. The four most common excuses, "too crowded", "can't edit", "not technical", "no time", all have an answer. What stops people is rarely a lack of ability, it's a lack of a clear system.

Reflection

Which of the four excuses do you recognise most in yourself?

What would a YouTube channel do for you and your LME journey, if it worked?

Checklist

- ☐ I have read, or watched, the first two lessons of the course.
- ☐ I have answered the reflection questions above honestly.
- ☐ I have decided to take the first step, however small.

This week's step

Write down the one excuse you chose above, and write right below it why it no longer holds up.

PILLAR 1

Find a profitable niche

The most common reason beginners fail is the wrong niche. See YouTube as a marketplace, not a stage: ask what the market wants, not just what you feel like making. A promising niche usually has a channel under a hundred thousand subscribers with a video over a hundred thousand views, started in the last one to six months, with steady growth and content that's easy to recreate. Validate the niche before you build on it, not after.

Reflection

Write down three topics you could make fifty videos about.

Which of the three topics have you seen the most small channels grow quickly in?

☒ Checklist for a good niche

- ☐ I have found a channel under 100,000 subscribers with a video over 100,000 views.
- ☐ The channel was started in the last 1-6 months and is growing steadily.
- ☐ The content is easy to recreate without showing your face.
- ☐ Other small channels in the same niche are getting views too.

This week's step

Create a fresh channel with no history, search your topic, and write down the three channels YouTube recommends you most often.

PILLAR 2

Idea and packaging

Once the niche is in place, almost everything is decided by the title and the thumbnail. You can have the best video in the world, but without good packaging it won't be seen. Don't reinvent the wheel, model what has already won. Good titles are broad, under sixty characters, and good thumbnails have two to three focal points, clear text and contrast. Simple beats detailed almost every time.

Reflection

Find three thumbnails in your niche. Which would you click on, and why?

Write three titles for your first video. Are they broad enough, and under sixty characters?

☒ Checklist for good packaging

- ☐ The title is broad enough that many will click, not too narrow.
- ☐ The title is under sixty characters so it doesn't get cut off.
- ☐ The thumbnail has two to three focal points and clear contrast.
- ☐ The title and image promise one clear thing, and the video keeps that promise.

This week's step

Use the "Packaging" recipe in the course to get ten titles and a thumbnail idea for your first video.

AI and production

The script is the backbone of the video. Claude writes a full script in twenty minutes, with good flow and a natural tone, when you give it a winning script as a reference. You make the voice with an AI tool like ElevenLabs, and source or create images with AI. Eighty percent of the job can now be done with AI. Then put production on a system: idea, script, voice, editing, review, publishing, like a board with cards you move forward. That makes you a leader, not a one-person show.

Reflection

Which production step do you dread the most? What can AI take off your hands?

What are the first fifteen seconds of your video, your hook?

☒ Checklist for production

- ☐ I have used the “Script” recipe and gotten my first draft from Claude.
- ☐ I have tested ten variations of the hook with the “Hook” recipe.
- ☐ I have made a board with the columns idea, script, voice, editing, published.
- ☐ I know which steps I do myself, and which AI or a freelancer can take.

This week's step

Write your very first script with Claude, and get it ready for editing in LME Reel Studio.

MODULE 5

Scale and earn money

A channel can earn money in several ways at once: ads from the partner program, sponsorships as the channel grows, and your own products and services from day one. For you at LME, that last one is especially powerful, the channel can send people straight to your courses, books and community. The most common mistake is doing nothing with what you've learned. Start with one channel and one niche, learn from the numbers, and scale only once the first one works.

Reflection

Which of your own products or services could your channel send people on to?

In three months, what's one number you want to see go up?

Checklist to get going

- ☐ I have chosen my niche for this round.
- ☐ I have published, or planned, my first video.
- ☐ I know where the channel should send people on to in LME.
- ☐ I have set a date to check the numbers again.

This week's step

Choose your niche this week. That's enough to be underway.

You have the system now 🌸

You don't need to see the whole staircase to take the first step. Come back to this workbook whenever you need a little push, and check things off as you go. I'm cheering you on.
